Wednesday Morning..... July 22, 1857.

The very Latest from Saratoga.

SARATOGA, July 21.

The fracture in the pipe, which conveys the water to the bottling houses at Congress Springs, has been repaired. The Spring will be open to the public on Wednesday Morning.

The above comes by telegraph to the Associated Press. We have been furnished with private despatches of a later date:

SARATOGA, July 21, 5 P. M.

Another fracture has just been discovered in the pipe. Several plants of water are lost, and the greatest consternation prevails. Nine bottle-holders have been despatched for putty.

LATER.

5 P. M.—The loss by the new fracture in the pipe of the bottling house is estimated at seven shillings. We obtain these figures from the agent of the underwriters. The excitement is subsiding. It is doubtful whether the Spring will be open before Thursday.

LATEST FROM KANSAS.

Gov. Walker Marching on Lawrence.

Mr. Theodore L. Hosmer left Lawrence on Friday morning last. On the same day there had been held at a public meeting held on Thursday, to resist the Territorial Tax. Before it all things should be made to collect the taxes. He met Gov. Walker ten miles from Lawrence, with seven companies of infantry. He informed the Governor that while the inhabitants of the people of Lawrence were, but an enemy was around. He said he would try to arrange it peaceably if either party was there to meet him. Gov. Walker kindly replied that he would not shed any more blood than was necessary.

The Governor was carrying into Lawrence, Gen. Lane was not at Topeka, but had been sent for.

The above, from the St. Louis Democrat of Monday, explains the position of affairs in Kansas, at the date of latest advices by mail. It will be seen that Mr. Buchanan's Governor, is the puppet of the Slave Power, alarmed no doubt by the ominous growlings at his supineness in not carrying out of the decree of those who long ago ordained that Kansas should be cursed—with bondage, is now ambitious to eclipse the fame of Shannon, and for that purpose is moving toward Lawrence with a regiment at his heels. We shall see how he will be met.

Resistance to him and all the progeny and decrees of the Territorial courts that he and his predecessor have created, is going to be made, we trust, in not rebellion. The treasons and rebellion are on the other side—not treason to arrest-like against the forms of law, but against the eternal right upon which all law should be founded. The invasion commenced long ago, when the Missourians invaded the Territory, took possession of the polls, drove away the settlers, and elected their Bogtrot to seats in the Legislature that passed the acts which Walker is invoking the military to enforce at the bayonet's point. It was thought by many that the accumulating additional guilt at every succeeding move that the Border Ruffian party has made, until now there is not a member of the rebellious gang, from Walker down to the district constables, but should be hung, has put the fear of them all, who does not deserve a halter for his zeal. There is no law in Kansas; the acts of the State legislature have no validity; and in its attempted enforcement by the courts is an outrage that should not be submitted to for an hour, no matter who comes to ensure obedience and respect. Walker knows this, as he has been told so by moderate men; but they are parties to the infernal conspiracy and serve after the fact—and if they attempt what they now seem to threaten, upon their heads let the responsibility rest. The Free State men will fight, so, before Heaven, they ought!

Supreme Court—Southern District.

Judge Scates' resignation leaves a vacancy in the Supreme Court to be filled by the Senate. Southern District. The candidates named, are E. H. Wash, of Wilds, and ex-Senator Bunsen, of Clinton, between whom the people will be obliged to choose. Politically, if politics be considered in an estimate of qualifications, they are both objectionable. Bunsen, for his subserviency to Douglas and the Slave Power, in which he does violence to his convictions, and Wash for the same reason, though he knows no better. Bunsen, at the time the Nebraska infamy was broached, made a show of independence, but became he cared a whit for the question he promptly "fell into line" and thereby as opportunity did advance his own ambitious views at the expense of a rival whom he does not affect to love. In company with McClernand, he kicked up somewhat of a hobbery, and when Trumbull was elected to the Senate, either of these gentlemen would gladly have been competitor for his place, if he had been asked. Both spent the winter in buttonholing members and outsiders in the lobby of the Legislature, but we never heard that in answer to their hints either of them got kicked. McClernand has gone back to the enemy, as he is to be, on report says, rewarded with a foreign mission, for his zeal and unswerving fidelity to principle. Why should not Bunsen be allowed to go on the Bench at a salary of $1,200 a year? Webb stands in the way. He is a new convert to the doctrine of Douglas—but a new hymn in the school of Douglas—and must be paid for. What he was the Whig candidate for Governor and for none than Carpenter, there was hope that he would prove himself a white man and a friend of free white men; but the death of a relative in Kentucky, happening during the Nebraska discussion, whereby he came into possession, by inheritance, of human chattels, validated in the commonwealth at about $40,000, wrought a wonderful change in his views on the subject of slavery in general and his political duties in particular; and he abandoned Henry Clay and his doctrines, and threw himself into the arms of the Abolitionists, where he is yet. The prizes of Congress, as quoted in the Southern papers, are of infinitely more consequence to him that Clay's memorable and noble remonstrance against the extension of human bondage. Personally "Bill," as he is familiarly called, is a good specimen of the Egyptian lawyer. He would not support more his head and mast, if perchance thereof were low, by opening an office in Chicago; at all events, he would be sure to achieve a reputation of being a very clever, lazy, companionable fellow. That his legal acquirements would add both dignity and facility to the Bench is now conditional, we may easily believe, without paying tribute to Mr. Wash's powers as a lawyer or qualifications as a judge; but that they would increase our high opinion of him we do not care to assert.

Who will be elected, we do not much care. Bunsen's name in the district when Chicago is to be made, as a source thence as loan stock, or as probationary clergyman in Paradise; and their inducements one way or the other will hardly be worth a row. Why not nominate Judge Hanchett, and see how many Bob Ingersoll's Baker's dozen of believers in the Declaration of Independence can be rallied on that issue?

The Cook County Democracy are [illegible] Democratic Convention, on the 4th and 5th. Among the sayings and doings of Sunday, we find the following report in the Portage Sentinel:

Sunday was a great day at the Fair Grounds. The weather being fine, a great number of persons were present. To attempt a report of the speeches, or the sentiments advanced by the different speakers, would be too great a task. Mr. Kellog, of Newton Falls, was exceedingly dull—none to have it understood that he believed nothing in the Bible; that it was all a lie, and that no intelligent man could pay any attention to its commands. He believed reason and intelligence to be supreme, and was emphatically a "higher law" man. He said that if "God Almighty" had not given us the means to get through the last long winter, Their last Dollar has been expended in getting in their little crop, their only dependency for the future, their only support for the winter, which will soon be upon them. This, their last and only hope, is now being completely and entirely destroyed by myriads upon myriads of little devils, a vestige of the crop remains, in others the stalks of the grain only remains, while in all of cases the destruction is complete. In my vicinity alone, I have been informed that from this year, which, with a fair season, would have been worth to the farmer from $12,000 to $15,000, but are now entirely worthless, and the farmers will be ruined for life. That is from the whole. These destructive insects seem to extend over all the country that is settled, and much that is not, from near St. Paul to the Mississippi, so far north as they are settled, and to the east and west. Red River Valley is a report seeing them first some 350 miles north of St. Paul this year before and in front of settling. They fly in swarms often at a great height, and in such numbers as to darken the sun oftentimes. They are obliged to fly before the wind, and we if they wish to go in a particular direction they must wait for a fair wind. They came here last August from up river, and that seems to be their first appearance. They have commenced laying, and already we hear of their ravages in the vicinity of St. Paul, where none were hatched. How far they will extend this year before downward march cannot now be told, but from the distance they traveled last year to reach us it is quite probable that they will extend all over Southern Minnesota, and that the first of the later autumn will overtake them, which will not be until they have laid destruction in the shape of eggs to another year, according to naturalists such female deposits 150 eggs. I think that there is reasonable grounds for hope that southern Minnesota will be an exception. Being so much settled, they will be on the wing before they have an opportunity to lay, and not well adapted for their laying operations. The sandy soil of the upper country, particularly on the rivers, is especially suited to their wants, as there they easily deposited in it, and the spring sun soon and rapidly warms them into life. It is our earnest hope and trust that Southern Minnesota will be free from the pest, and that out of their abundance the suffering ones, (for there will be many such, and it's of no use to try to disguise the fact,) may be fed.
